THE SHOW

An independent watchdog podcast built on radical transparency, unyielding accountability, and data-driven inquiry. Broadcasting from Georgia to a national audience, ATFQ moves past political theater to demand direct answers on the questions institutions would rather leave unanswered.

THE HOST — VIC APPIAH

Victor "Vic" Appiah is the independent host of ATFQ, broadcasting from Georgia to a national audience. An aviation-industry veteran — FAA Telecommunications Operations Analyst, licensed commercial pilot, drone educator — Vic brings aviation-grade rigor to on-mic accountability journalism. Every episode is anchored in radical transparency, data-driven inquiry, and questions the mainstream declines to press.

FOUR CORE PILLARS

Science

Stripping speculation to focus on empirical evidence.

Politics

Dissecting institutional narratives and demanding accountability.

Philosophy

Challenging ethical frameworks and societal structures.

Religion

Analyzing belief systems with rigorous intellectual scrutiny.

WHAT ATFQ INVESTIGATES.

Every episode is a live-action case study — a national trend, a state-level power play, or a local decision — put under the same analytical scrutiny you'd apply to a flight system: checklists, tolerances, redundancies. Recurring segments include media gatekeeping, party primaries, and the "Georgia Case Files" — showing how the biggest national stories land in real communities.
